From the Principal's desk

An educational imperative from Nursery School right up to Matric is to progressively move students from other-regulation to self-regulation. Every child, at a young age, is other-regulated, as their mothers will regulate feeding times, play times, sleep times, bath times, pretty much everything that their child does. But as the child gets older, it is vital that children start to learn self-regulation skills, also called executive functioning skills. These skills will boost children's responsibility, decision-making and achievement levels.

Unfortunately, in the modern age, hyperparenting often inhibits this learning process (hyperparenting is child-rearing in which parents become too involved in the micro-management of their children's lives). At The King's School, we partner with parents to train children of all ages to learn and master self-regulation skills like:

- initiation skills (getting started on a task without external prompting)
- organising skills (workspace and materials)
- prioritising skills (deciding on sequence of tasks)
- listening actively (listening with intent to action)
- staying on task until completion

The teaching of any of these skills will take time and practice, but requires motivation, extended feedback, patience and the joint efforts of school and parents. Parents, resist the temptation to intervene in challenges that your child can solve themselves with a little guidance and set tasks for them to practice each skill. Remember that children learn resilience by persevering through difficult challenges, and our tendency to protect them by helicopter parenting is not helpful.

HIGH SCHOOL FLORIDA ATHLETICS FRIENDLY

On Friday we took 49 athletes to Hoërskool Florida for our first external Athletics competition in two years. The busload of learners and teachers was full of excitement and nerves as we looked forward to good healthy competition from the following schools:

Hoërskool Florida; Krugersdorp High School; Crawford Ruimsig; Hoërskool Hartbeesport and Hoërskool Roodepoort.

Unfortunately the weather did not play its part on Friday and shortly after the competition began, lightning and rain forced us all off the athletic field. The weather never improved and the host school eventually cancelled the event. We thank Ms Di Woolley of Hoërskool Florida for the invite and all the work she and her team put in to host the day.

We achieved some good results on the events completed:

Atlehang Mohlabane – placed 6th – U15 Girls High Jump
 Tumelo Lesela – placed 6th – U17 Boys High Jump
 Musa Nkosi – placed 7th – U19 Girls Long Jump
 Gundo Nwedo – placed 3rd – U19 Boys Long Jump
 Reboane Motsoetla – placed 4th – U19 Boys Long Jump
